

Magpie Alley

No. 106

THE HERITAGE of FLEET STREET

April 2026

Magpie Alley is a short passageway just off Bouverie Street, EC4. It tells the story of the printing industry in Fleet Street.

The alley is about 60 feet long and 10 feet high, with lights in the ceiling. Its north wall is covered with colourful ceramic tiles showing printers, printing offices and important events from Fleet Street's history.

This panel shows some of the images found in the alley. The top row includes the City street sign, a view of the alley from Bouverie Street, and the badge of Wynken de Worde, one of the first printers in the area.

The bottom row shows a printing press from around 1600 and printers working with trays of type.
