Virginia Woolf was born in 1882. She was one of the most important writers of the 20th century and was part of the Bloomsbury Group. She is best known for books such as Mrs Dalloway and To the Lighthouse.

In 1912, Virginia married Leonard Woolf. They lived for a short time at Cliffords Inn, just off Fleet Street. Before that, Virginia had lived in Bloomsbury with her brother, while Leonard lived in another part of the same building. This was unusual at the time.

Virginia and Leonard spent their time writing and meeting friends. Virginia also kept diaries and wrote many letters, which tell us about their lives together.

In 1913, Virginia became unwell again, and they left Cliffords Inn. They later moved to Hogarth House in Richmond, where they continued to live and write.
