

The Sun was launched in its current form on 17 November 1969 under the ownership of Rupert Murdoch. It replaced an earlier newspaper of the same name and changed into an easy-to-read tabloid aimed at everyday readers.

The paper quickly grew in popularity and passed the Daily Mirror in sales in 1978. It became famous for bold headlines, exclusive stories, sports coverage, celebrity news, and campaigns on issues important to its readers.

Over the years, The Sun has created popular features such as the Dear Deidre advice column and has supported many charity campaigns. It has also organised competitions, holidays, and fundraising events that involved millions of readers.

Today, The Sun is one of the UK's best-known newspapers, with a large audience in print and online. It is recognised for its strong opinions, memorable front pages, and ability to influence public debate.

Front page first edition of the Sun