Glasgow Herald (No.56–57)

Tall, narrow frontage with post-Classical details applied in an Art Deco manner. Granite and gilt ground floor followed by a three-storey bow window, mezzanine and attic storeys. Built in 1927 by Tubbs, Son & Duncan. Grade II listed.

No.58–59

Late C19 or early C20 renditions of traditional forms. The Queen Anne details and proportions of No.58 outshine those of No.59. Now combined as a single building.

No.60

Associated with C18 clock and scientific instrument maker George Adams and his successors. Above the lower two storeys it retains Georgian forms, though probably rebuilt later.

J Lyons Café (No.61)

Former tea shop retaining formal, well-executed Baroque Revival detailing typical of quality Edwardian buildings. Built in 1910, probably by Lyons' in-house architects. (claxity.com)

JUNCTION WITH BOUVERIE STREET

The Scotsman (No.63)

A dignified example of post-war stripped Classicism. The prominent fourth-storey cornice and wrought-iron balconies stand out, while sculptural details recall the original occupant. Built in 1921 by Frank Matcham. (claxity.com)

No.64–65

Asymmetrical Postmodern building with a large arch opening onto a courtyard. Contrasting dark lower storeys, lighter middle storeys and a recessed attic create a balanced composition. Built in 1988 by YRM Partnership.

The Tipperary (No.66)

Post-Fire building (foundation laid 1667), re-clad with new interiors in 1895. Grade II listed.

No.67

Rounded corner with restrained four-storey cladding and attic. Built in 1926 by A. A. H. Scott.

JUNCTION WITH WHITEFRIARS STREET

The Fleet Street frontage from Nos.68–85, including Barclays Bank (1921 by Dawson, Son & Allardyce) and Chronicle House (1923 by Ellis & Clarke), was demolished in 2022 despite a 2020 certificate of immunity from listing.

JUNCTION WITH SALISBURY COURT

Reuters & Press Association Building (No.82–85)

Lutyens' stripped Classical style is enlivened by features including a double-height entrance arch and concave attic storeys. Built 1934–38. Grade II listed. (claxity.com)

Birmingham Post (No.88)

Edwardian newspaper office with applied ornament and good proportions. Built in 1900 by Belcher & Joass.

No.89

Brick with second-storey stone facing and an 1897 Art Nouveau numeral plaque.

St Bartholomew House (No.90–94)

Tudoresque brick with sandstone dressings, bay and arched windows, loggia and gabled roof. Good ornamental carvings along the ground-floor frontages. Built in 1900 by H. Huntley Gordon. Grade II listed.

The Old Bell (No.95) & No.96

Simple low-rise buildings of probable C17 origin with 1897 façades. The pub occupies No.95. Grade II listed.

No.97

Workmanlike late Victorian brick building with a canted corner.

The Punch Tavern (No.98–100)

Victorian brick façade with stone dressings, distinguished by finely carved window surrounds, articulated architraves and richly tiled entrance. The ornate interiors include a well-preserved hammerbeam skylight, making the Neo-Jacobean design especially successful. Built in 1894 by Saville & Martin. Grade II listed.

No.101

Brick commercial premises with stone detailing. Late C19 refacing of a former cigar and snuff manufacturer's premises.
