

85 Fleet Street - The Reuters Building

No. 120

THE HERITAGE of FLEET STREET

April 2026

Sir Edwin Lutyens (1868–1947) designed many famous buildings, including the Reuters building at 85 Fleet Street, built in 1935.

Reuters was a large news company that reported major world events, such as the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln and the Fall of the Berlin Wall.

The building is officially protected (Grade II listed). It has a stone front, a large entrance, simple upper floors, and a curved top. Small design details make it look special.

When Reuters left the building in 2005, it marked the end of big news companies being based on Fleet Street. Some original parts, like bronze name signs, have been taken away, but the building is still important for its design.

