

St Brides Crypt and Exhibition

No. 132

THE HERITAGE of FLEET STREET

April 2026

St Bride's crypt is worth visiting. It shows fragments of previous buildings on the site, finds from post-war excavations, and has a large exhibition space. The first building here was from Roman times, and there have been eight churches in total. The seventh was destroyed in the Great Fire of London (1666).

The current church, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, was rebuilt after the fire, damaged again in 1940, and later restored.

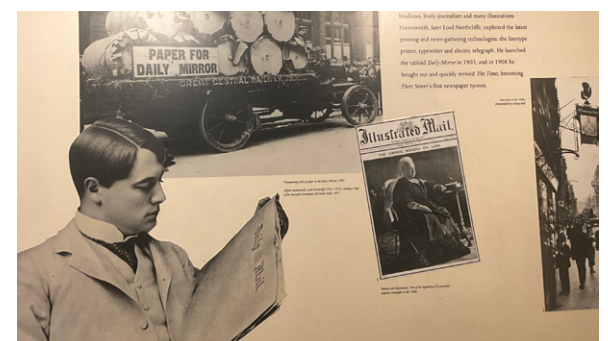

13th and 15th century foundations, and a cast iron coffin made to deter "resurrectionist" who would dig up recent burials in order to sell the bodies to medical schools for dissection. Historical panels

Evening News account of the bombing in 1940

A few of the finds made in the excavations

The panel commemorating Lord Nortcliffe, a benefactor of the church

The historical panels in exhibition area

A painting of Fleet Street in the 1930s